ANNOUNCEMENTS

On November 5th we all vote – but only one counts. “... the Most High God is sovereign over the kingdoms of men and sets over them anyone he wishes.” (Daniel 5:21b) Reflect on this and may God give insight. Above all, let us take advantage of the access we have to this Most High God – we know him as Abba! We know where He is taking us – we’re just not sure how we’ll get there!

A message from Felix Diaz (Belize Team Leader): "We wanted to touch base regarding our upcoming trip. The church in Santa Elena has been having some struggles and they requested a different, down-sized project with a smaller team. We plan to support them by helping build a platform for their praise band instruments. Felix will be leading a team of 4 men: Jerry Newswanger, Jay Hurst, Landon Stoner, and Caleb Osorio. They plan to travel February 22 through March 1."

Food for Thought:

Taken from the book "Deeper" by Dane C. Ortlund

What we all tend to do is walk through life amassing a sense of who we are as an aggregate of what we think everyone else thinks of us. We walk along, building a sense of self through all the feedback pinging back at us. We don't even realize we're doing it. And when others are critical, or snub us, or ignore us, or ridicule us, that builds our sense of who we are. It inevitably shapes us. And so we must constantly hold the gospel before our eyes. And as the gospel becomes real to us, the need for human approval loses its vice-like grip on our hearts, because we're no longer putting our heads down on our pillows at night medicating our sense of worth with human approval. The doctrine of justification frees us not only from the judgment of God in the future but also from the judgment of people in the present.

But what if we went into the interview, the conversation, the classroom, the game, already okay? Already justified. Not just theologically but emotionally. Not just in our mind but in our gut. We would be world shakers.
